Psycholinguistics Wikipedia

Psycholinguistics or psychology of language is the study of the interrelation between linguistic factors and psychological aspects. The field is concerned with psychological and neurobiological factors that enable humans to acquire, use, comprehend, and produce language. The discipline is mainly concerned with the mechanisms in which languages are processed and represented in the brain.

Sentence processing Wikipedia

Sentence processing takes place whenever a reader or listener processes a language utterance either in isolation or in the context of a conversation or a text. Many studies of the human language comprehension process have focused on reading of single utterances, sentences without context.

Home page of Emmanuel Dupoux. In my research, I have been focusing on the early acquisition of linguistic and social skills in infants and their more or less reversible consequences in adults in terms of a cognitive specialization for a particular language or culture. My approach is to run comparative studies in adults and infants and test theoretical models that take into account both types.

Dyslexia and the Brain What Does Current Research Tell Us

The frontal lobe is the largest and responsible for controlling speech, reasoning, planning, regulating emotions, and consciousness. In the 19th century, Paul Broca was exploring areas of the brain used for language and noticed a particular part of the brain that was impaired in a man whose speech became limited after a stroke.
